In the summer of 1984, Jerome Sitko embarked on a journey that would change his life forever. He packed his car with a few belongings and set off on a cross-country road trip that would take him from his home in New York City to the Pacific Ocean and back. Along the way, he would encounter a diverse cast of characters and experience a wide range of adventures. His journey would be documented in a book, "Summertime Journey," which would become a classic of travel literature.

Sitko's journey began in New York City, where he was living at the time. He was a young man in his early twenties, with a passion for travel and adventure. He had always dreamed of seeing the United States, and he was finally ready to make his dream a reality.

Sitko's first stop was Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. He had never been to Pittsburgh before, but he had heard about its rich history and culture. He spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Andy Warhol Museum and the Carnegie Museum of Art. He also took a walk through the Strip District, a vibrant neighborhood known for its food and nightlife.

From Pittsburgh, Sitko continued west to Chicago, Illinois. Chicago was a much bigger city than Pittsburgh, and Sitko was overwhelmed by its size and energy. He spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Art Institute of Chicago and the Field Museum of Natural History. He also took a boat tour of the Chicago River.

From Chicago, Sitko continued west to Minneapolis, Minnesota. Minneapolis was a much smaller city than Chicago, but it had a vibrant arts and culture scene. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Walker Art Center and the Minneapolis Institute of Arts. He also took a walk through the Uptown neighborhood, a trendy neighborhood known for its shops and restaurants.

From Minneapolis, Sitko continued west to Fargo, North Dakota. Fargo was a small town, but it had a rich history. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Fargo Theater and the Plains Art Museum. He also took a walk through the downtown area, which was lined with historic buildings.

From Fargo, Sitko continued west to Billings, Montana. Billings was a small city, but it was surrounded by beautiful scenery. Sitko spent a few days exploring the area, visiting the Yellowstone River and the Beartooth Mountains. He also took a hike through the Custer National Forest.

From Billings, Sitko continued west to Spokane, Washington. Spokane was a large city, but it had a small-town feel. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Riverfront Park and the Spokane Museum of Art. He also took a walk through the downtown area, which was lined with shops and restaurants.

From Spokane, Sitko continued west to Seattle, Washington. Seattle was a large city, but it had a laid-back atmosphere. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Space Needle and the Museum of Pop Culture. He also took a walk through the Pike Place Market, a bustling public market known for its fresh seafood and produce.

From Seattle, Sitko continued west to Portland, Oregon. Portland was a large city, but it had a vibrant arts and culture scene. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Portland Art Museum and the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry. He also took a walk through the Pearl District, a trendy neighborhood known for its shops and restaurants.

From Portland, Sitko continued west to San Francisco, California. San Francisco was a large city, but it had a unique charm. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Golden Gate Bridge and the Alcatraz Island. He also took a walk through the North Beach neighborhood, a bohemian neighborhood known for its bookstores and coffee shops.

From San Francisco, Sitko continued west to Los Angeles, California. Los Angeles was a large city, but it had a sprawling metropolis. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Hollywood Walk of Fame and the Griffith Observatory. He also took a walk through the Santa Monica Pier, a popular tourist destination with a Ferris wheel and a carousel.

From Los Angeles, Sitko continued east to Phoenix, Arizona. Phoenix was a large city, but it had a desert climate. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Desert Botanical Garden and the Phoenix Art Museum. He also took a walk through the Old Town Scottsdale district, a historic district with shops and restaurants.

From Phoenix, Sitko continued east to Albuquerque, New Mexico. Albuquerque was a large city, but it had a rich cultural heritage. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Petroglyph National Monument and the Indian Pueblo Cultural Center. He also took a walk through the Old Town Albuquerque district, a historic district with shops and restaurants.

From Albuquerque, Sitko continued east to Denver, Colorado. Denver was a large city, but it had a mountain backdrop. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Denver Art Museum and the Museum of Nature & Science. He also took a walk through the Larimer Square district, a historic district with shops and restaurants.

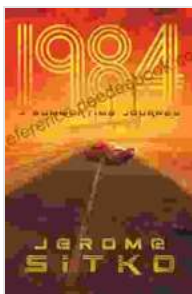

From Denver, Sitko continued east to Kansas City, Missouri. Kansas City was a large city, but it had a friendly atmosphere. Sitko spent a few days exploring the city, visiting the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art and the Kansas City Zoo. He also took a walk through the Country Club Plaza, a shopping district with shops and restaurants.
