

Italian Mountain Man: A Man Who Knows What He Wants at 93

Mauro Corona is a man of few words. But when he does speak, people listen.

He's a mountain man, a writer, and a sculptor. He's also a man of the people. He speaks his mind, even when it's not popular.

Corona was born in 1929 in the small mountain village of Erto, in the Dolomites of Italy. He grew up in a poor family, and he had to work hard from a young age. He started working as a stonemason at the age of 14, and he continued to work in the construction industry for many years.

In his early 50s, Corona decided to quit his job and pursue his passion for writing. He published his first novel, "The Red Tree," in 1987. The novel was a critical and commercial success, and it won the prestigious Campiello Prize.

Since then, Corona has published over 20 novels, as well as several collections of short stories and essays. His work has been translated into over 30 languages.

Corona is also a talented sculptor. He has created a number of sculptures that are on display in public places throughout Italy.

Corona is a man of many talents. But he is best known for his writing. His work is often autobiographical, and it explores the themes of nature, love, and loss.

Corona is a man who is not afraid to speak his mind. He is often critical of the modern world, and he has been known to make controversial statements. But he is also a man who is deeply compassionate. He cares about the people of his village, and he is always willing to help those in need.

Corona is a man who has lived a full and rich life. He is a man who knows what he wants, and he is not afraid to go after it.

Here are some quotes from Mauro Corona:

- "I am a mountain man. I live in the mountains, and I write about the mountains."

- "I don't like the modern world. It's too fast, and it's too noisy."
- "I believe in the power of nature. Nature is the source of all life."
- "Love is the most important thing in life. It's what makes us human."
- "Loss is a part of life. We all lose people we love. But we must not let loss define us."

Corona is a man of great wisdom and experience. His words are worth listening to.
